

UWC DELEGATES TO THE ARCTIC

We are excited to welcome up to 10 UWC students and recent graduates to join the FutureTalks Arctic Expedition August 24-28th 2018. The expedition will be a unique journey for 100 hand-picked delegates to explore the Norwegian Arctic while engaging in discussions on the future of humanity and our planet.

The delegates represent all sectors, all continents and all ages, and we have heads of state, leading entrepreneurs, accomplished academics, explorers, social entrepreneurs and sustainability experts - to name a few - joining us. A very diverse group, but all share a passion for creating a better future.

Now partnering up with UWC, we look forward to welcoming some of the up and coming future leaders and changemakers onboard!

You should apply if:

- You have a passion and flame burning! Your area of interest can be within any field, but your passion and dedication must be solid.
- You are a leader! The type of person who see needs, dream up projects and get working on them. You make ideas into reality. You are a doer.
- You are a team player! You are good at both building and activating your network. You understand that working together makes everyone stronger.
- You voice your opinions! You are not easily intimidated by people or scared to state your views even though they differ from the crowd. But – you are respectful in discussions, and able to admit when you are wrong.
- You want to engage actively in the FutureTalks community. You see this as an opportunity not just for a cool trip, but the start of something more. You want to engage in the long run as well.
- You are happy to do a presentation! A number of delegates will be invited to deliver a keynote at our Oslo conference (August 23rd).
